NATIONAL BANK AT STATE COLLEGE

Preliminary Organization Effected last Week.

OFFERS TO TAKE STOCK

Far Beyond the Proposed Capitalization To Be Capitalized at $225,000—To be Controlled by People of State College.

THE LOCATION OF THE BANK.

A national bank at State College, owned largely and controlled by the people of that town and vicinity, is now assured.

Permission has already been obtained from the authorities in Washington, D. C., for the establishment of a First National Bank at State College

This bank will have a capitalization of $225,000; four fifths of which will be held by people living or nearby this town. Therefore, even though a small fraction of the stock will be owned by strong financial interests at a distance, the bank will remain under the control and management of local interests.

STOCK SUBSCRIPTIONS AND DEPOSITS.

As soon as it became known that a bank organization would be perfected offers of stock subscriptions were received which would have absorbed the entire capitalization of the company several times over. In order, however, that this bank may prove of the greatest benefit possible to our citizens as a whole no large subscriptions of stock will be accepted, but the stock will be distributed in small blocks. A large number of deposit accounts have already been promised, which, in connection with the character of the men who are joining in this movement, undoubtedly assure the success of the undertaking.

PRELIMINARY ORGANIZATION.

The preliminary organization is now proceeding and has resulted so far in the selection of the following board of directors:—W. C. Patterson, C. T. Aikens, Louis E. Reber, J. T. McCormick, W. L. Foster, John Price Jackson, John W. Stuart, with Geo. C. Butz, as secretary. This board elected the president, vice-president and cashier, and perfected other details of organization at a meeting held last night.

LOCATION OF BANK.

It is proposed that the bank shall open its doors within the next two months. For this purpose temporary quarters will likely be secured in the old State College hotel building. Permanent quarters may later be obtained on the same site in the large new building to be erected next spring.

Among those present at the meeting held on Tuesday and Wednesday nights at the office of J. P. Jackson for the purpose of bringing about this organization were C. H. Foster, I. L. Foster, Geo. C. Butz, W. C. Patterson, M. S. McDowell, C. T. Aikens, Louis E. Reber, J. T. McCormick, John W. Stuart, and Wm. L. Foster. Many persons who were unable to be present sent messages in approval of the movement. Mr. W. C. Patterson presided at the meeting.—State College Times.

A Quiet Wedding.

William Poorman and Miss Mollie McKinley were quietly married at the Baptist parsonage in Milesburg on Tuesday morning, Oct. 18th, at 10:30 o'clock, by the pastor Rev. A. C. Lathrop. The groom is a well-known young man of Yarnell. The bride's home is near Mileeburg. She is much esteemed by her many friends. They were accompanied by Harry Shawley, of Yarnell as best man and Miss Viola Kline, of Yarnell, as maid of honor. Rev. A. D. Wirtz, of State College, assisted in the ceremony. After the ceremony the bridal company proceeded to the home of the groom where the wedding dinner was partaken of. Mr. and Mrs. Poorman will reside near Yarnell. The best wishes of many friends accompany them.

Married—Desmond Clyde Bissett, of Waverly N. Y., and Miss Myrtle Mae McClincy, of Unionville, Pa., at the M E., parsonage in Corning N. Y., by Rev W. H. Reese, Oct. 12, 1904. [A detailed account of wedding was crowded out this week but will appear in next issue. Ed.]

FARMER'S AROUSED.

Citizens Urged to Oppose Repeal Of the Grout Bill

HARRISBURG, PA., Oct. 19, 1904.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Information has reached the Secretary of Agriculture and the Dairy and Food Commissioner of this Commonwealth to the effect that the oleomargarine interests of the United States have formulated plans to combine and make a determined effort to secure the repeal of the bill, passed by Congress in 1902, known as the "Grout bill," which places a tax of ten cents a pound on colored oleomargarine.

Manufacturers of and dealers in oleomargarine are endeavoring to form a solid organization, including in its membership every manufacturer and dealer in oleomargarine in the United States. In the circular letter which is being spread broadcast, those who are in charge of the opposition to the law referred to, present their side of the subject in the following language:

"To secure the repeal of this law a large fund will be necessary. The first duty of the Association is to raise the fund and then work with it for the repeal of the tax on olemargarine. It is absolutely necessary that olemargarine dealers throughout the United States contribute, in order that this law may be repealed. Their existence depends upon the repeal of the law. A contribution of $25 entitles a dealer to membership. Every dealer in the country should join the Association and send the $25 membership fee to the secretary. Let every dealer that can possibly afford to join the Association send his $25 to Mr. Russell. If however, the dealer feels that he cannot afford that amount of money, let him send what he can afford, the largest possible amount that he can spare, for there is no danger of obtaining too large a fund. Do not delay in this matter. The raising of the fund is the most important step. Without it nothing can be done, and unless the fund is obtained in a very short time, it will be impossible to repeal the law at the coming session of Congress. Haste is necessary. Don't wait to see what your neighbor intends to do. Do what you can afford yourself, and do it now. If everybody delays, it will not be possible to have the law repealed, and oleomargarine dealers will have to go out of business."

A recent publication issued from the Dairy and Food Division of this Department, gives the appended important information relative to the value of the dairy interests of Pennsylvania:

"The latest figures obtainable show that the farm value of dairy products in Pennsylvania are exceeded by but one state in the Union, aggregating $35 860, 110,00 per annum, and that, according to the last census there were 32,600 farms in Pennsylvania which derived their principal income from the dairy. In 1900, the State had 943,773 dairy cows, and these produced 487,033,818 gallons of milk in one year. The total number of farms in the State, as reported by the last census, is 224,248, and the number reporting dairy products was 200,036, with a total valuation of $35,860,686. The butter made on 159,857 of these farms aggregated 74,221,085 pounds, of which amount 51,309,833 pounds were sold by the producers."

In view of the magnitude of the interests threatened, and the desire of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to foster and protect the same, the Secretary of Agriculture and Dairy and Food Commissioner, with the consent of the Governor, respectfully and earnestly urge all granges, farmers' alliances and kindred organizations, as well as dairymen and farmers, generally, to write to the Hon. Boies Penrose, and Hon. P. C. Knox, United States Senators, Washington, D. C., and to their respective members of Congress from Pennsylvania, urging them to work and vote against the repeal of the aforesaid "Grout bill," and to assist in thwarting the efforts of any and all persons who may endeavor to overthrow a law, the policy of which has been determined and which has proven by experience to be beneficial. If the statute should be repealed, it would not only seriously affect the welfare of every producer of butter, but it will also open the way for the general sale of substitutes for dairy products, to the injury of the consumer who may be misled by such substitutions, and fail to secure from the markets the articles he desires to place upon his own table.

Very respectfully,

N. B. CRITCHFIELD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

B. H. WARBEE,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

AWFUL BATTLE IN EASTERN WAR

Losses of the Past week Will Exceed 40.000.

RUSSIANS FIGHT HARD

Awful Artillery Duels and Infantry Charges—Kuropatkin's Defeat Far From A Crushing One.

DETAILS OF TERRIBLE CARNAGE

TOKIO, October 16—In the reports of the great battle which continues to arrive from the front, the most striking feature is the terrible record of the Russian dead. Before the severe fighting on October 14, General Oku's army alone recovered and buried 2,000, making the total number of Russians buried by the Japanese, with Nodzu's army still to be heard from 6,550 Applying the usual calculations and making reasonable allowances for the fighting of the 14th and 15th, the Russian loss will exceed forty thousand.

Fragmentary reports of Japanese casualties are coming in. General Oku, up to and including October 14, lost 3,500 men. Estimates of the total Japanese losses are not possible, but they are small in comparison with the frightful losses of the Russians.

DISPATCHES FROM THE FIELD.

Reports dispatched late Saturday from the field are in the following chronological order:

"The main force of the right army, which had already occupied Obuochiafun Heights, reached a line on the Shakhe River, but one division of the enemy continues to offer a stubborn resistance. The centre army has reached its objective, and has been heavily engaged since the morning of October 15. On the morning of October 15 the enemy in front of the left army continued holding its positions north of Shahopo and Lamuntun, offered a strong resistance. The centre column is engaged in taking Shahopo and the main body of the right column is advancing against Lamuntun and is attacking that position. The enemy has six batteries between Shahopo and Sugangtai, which are vigorously shelling the attacking column and our position at Linchienpo, but the bombardment is not strong enough to prevent our advance. On October 11, the left column of the center army lost 261 killed and wounded.

MANY DEAD BURIED.

"The casualties to ourselves and the Russians and the number of trophies captured by the left army follows:

"During the five days from October 10 October 14, inclusive, our losses were about 2,500 killed and wounded, officers included. During the four days from October 10 to October 13, the number of corpses left by the enemy and buried by us reached 2,000. The enemy's dead, after the battle of October 14 were very numerous. The prisoners taken numbered 80. The principal trophies were 30 guns and many rifles, uniforms and accoutrements. The latter are still uncounted.

"There are some forces of the enemy on the right bank of the Shakhe River, in front of the main strength of the right and center armies, but no battle on a great scale has occurred. The forces of the enemy at Shahopo and Laumuntan, facing the left army have been offering a stubborn resistance, but have been dislodged and their positions have been captured. On the afternoon of October 15, a force of the enemy appeared near Santaokanguezu and continued to offer resistance until sundown, portions of our center and left armies engaging them."

While the battle of Shake river has undoubtedly resulted in a Japanese victory, Monday's dispatches indicate that Kuropatkin's defeat was far from being as crushing as the news of Saturday and Sunday presaged.

His offensive movements failed utterly, but it is apparent that even in his retreat he is battling stubbornly and inflicting severe losses on the Japanese, while himself sustaining casualties that are described as "appalling."

At several critical points along the extended line of battle, the Russians have launched attack after attack at the Japanese, and in some instances succeeded in driving them out and occupying their positions. In one such attack they captured eleven guns.

These, however, are apparently but isolated successes in what is otherwise a general defeat.

An official report to st. Petersburg says that the cannonading was re-opened along the entire front Monday, No official advices have been received from Tokio, based on "reliable private sources," says the Japanese continue their advance and that Oku is now operating to block the Russian retreat along the railroad.

Mukden, October 17.—1.30 P. M.—The Russian forces at 11 o'clock this forenoon penetrated the Japanese centre and it is reported, captured twelve of thirteen guns, and 150 prisoners east of the railway. At another point during the day Siberian regiments took twenty-four guns.

The Russian operations Monday have been quite successful. The Japanese, after a terrific stubborn resistance, were compelled to retire along their whole line, losing heavily. All the trenches carried by the Russians were filled with the Japanese dead. In one not very large trench there were counted 600 corpses of Japanese. In spite of their losses the Japanese were undaunted. They have brought up siege guns and have left no stone unturned to retain the mastery of the situation. Every step the Russians pushed forward Monday has been in the face of a superb resistance that has cost the Russians dear. The Japanese seem to be willing to fight until they are annihilated.

Today is the tenth day of the battle.

McCLURE—STROOP.

Beautiful Wedding Ceremony in the Presbyterian Church at Milesburg.

Beautiful and impressive was the wedding ceremony that united in holy bonds of wedlock, Frank Chandler McClure, of Patton, and Miss Elizabeth Junkin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Stroop, of Milesburg, in the Presbyterian church at the later named place on Wednesday Oct. 14, at 12:30 o'clock.

The church was filled with guests when the bridal party entered from the vestibule where they formed. While Miss Henrietta G. Wright, of Philadelphia, sang the Presbyterian wedding hymn "Oh, Perfect Love" the ushers walked down the centre aisle, the maids down the side aisles. The ushers took their positions at the right of the altar, while the maids crossed the front of the church and countermarched up the centre aisle to meet the bride leaning on the arm of her father, who was preceded by the maid of honor and the flower girl. They took their places at the altar when the beautiful ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. James Ramsey, of the Presbyterian church of Beaver, Pa. After the ceremony the bridal party left the church to the strains of Mendelsohns wedding march as rendered by Mrs. E. G. Patterson, of Pittsburg.

The bride was dressed in silk mulle, wore a veil and carried a shower boquet. The maid of honor was Miss Lorene B. Mattern, of Milesburg, and she was dressed in silk mulle. The bridesmaids were Miss Mary H. Wright, of Philadelphia, and Miss Gertrude E. Bouse, of Tyrone. They were attired similar to Miss Mattern and carried boquets of pink and white carnations.

Little Miss Gussie Bullock, of Milesburg, was a very pretty flower girl. She carried a large boquet of flowers.

Mr. Renal Somerville, an attorney of Patton, Pa., was best man and Messrs. M. B. Cowher and J. Lawrence Dole, both of Patton, were the ushers.

A delightful reception at the home of the bride's parents followed, where quite a large number of guests assembled to congratulate the newly wedded couple and partake of a wedding luncheon.

The church was tastefully decorated with ferns and palms and the house with potted plants and ferns.

Mr. McClure, the groom holds a fine position with the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Company at Patton.

The bride is a bright and attractive young lady. She was a successful Centre County school teacher, a graduate of the Bellefonte High School and is educated and refined. She received a large number of very handsome and useful presents, embracing silver and china ware, bric-a-brac, art works, table linen etc.

The guests from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Brown, Patton; Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Patterson, Pittsburg; Mrs. Jane Welch, Mrs. Margaret Wilson and Mr. William Bottorf, Bellefonte; Mrs. Mary M. Everhart, Millerstown; Mrs. Emma Murray, Landisburg; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Bouse, Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Garman, Mrs. R. V. West and Mr. Edward Black, Tyrone; Mrs. Nelson Graham, Spruce Hill, Pa.; Mr. Robert McClure, Green Park, Pa.

The newly wedded couple left on the 5 p. m., train Wednesday for Washington, D. C., and other points of interest in that section and after an absence of several weeks will reside at Patton.

A BRUTAL ASSAULT.

Of Which Miss Anna Love of Tyrone Was the Victim.

KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS

Struck on the Head With instrument by Brutal Negro Who Then Made His Escape—Blood Hounds on His Trail.

SHE IS A SISTER OF JUDGE JNO. G. LOVE

The people of Tyrone were thrown into a state of wild excitement Tuesday evening by a dastardly and cowardly assault on Miss Anna Love, a sister of Judge John G. Love, of Bellefonte, and one of the mostly highly esteemed young ladies of Tyrone, at the hands of a cowardly and burly negro. Miss Love resides near Nealmont, one of the suburbs of the town, with a sister. She had been in Tyrone during the afternoon shopping, and left for her home about 7 o'clock. She rode to Nealmont on a trolley car and started to walk to her home and when within a short distance of the house a burly negro stepped out from behind a tree, where he had been in hiding, and dealt her a murderous blow on the head with a club, which felled her, unconscious, to the ground. In falling her head struck a sharp stone and a deep gash was cut in her forehead above the left eye. The negro probably thinking he had killed his victim, hurried away, and a few minutes later Miss Love recovered and managed to make her way to the house. A physician was summoned and her wounds dressed, and while undergoing the painful operation she related her experience.

The police authorities of Tyrone were at once notified and a man hunt for the negro was begun. The scene of the assault was visited and Miss Love's purse was found, but the money it contained, about $5, was missing. A negro was picked up by one of the posses scouring the country, but it is not thought that he was the assailant. The people are eager and anxious to capture the fellow, and to aid them a pair of man-trailing bloodhounds, recently purchased in Boston by Clark Grazier, of Pennsylvania Furnace, was put on the trail early Wednesday morning in the hope of capturing the villian.

The fellow is described as a tall thin fellow attired in a light gray coat.

Emil O. Peterson, formerly of this place, but late of Jersey Shore, died in the Williamsport Hospital Wednesday morning at 8.45 o'clock as a result of being run over by a freight train at Oak Grove station Tuesday night. It is presumed that he attempted to crawl under a train standing on the siding and that before he got through the train moved with the above terrible result.

He was taken to the Williamsport Hospital where he expired at the above mentioned time.

E. O. Peterson is of Swedish descent and is about thirty years of age. He was a son of John Peterson of Jersey Shore. He was quite well and favorably known in Bellefonte where he was employed for several years as a machinist at the engine house of the Central Railroad of Pennsylvania.

he had gone. Neither could I find the curly haired waiter at Raucher's. He had left also, but it was to join the volunteers at San Antonio.

Was there meaning in this coincidence? I resolved to know. Visiting the former haunts of both boys, I failed to come upon any evidence of an understanding between them or of their having shown any special interest in the Jeffrey tragedy. Both seemed to have been strangely reticent in regard to it, the florist's boy showing stupidity and the waiter such satisfaction in his prospective soldiering that no other topic was deemed worthy his attention. The latter had a sister, and she could not say enough of the delight her brother had shown at the prospect of riding a horse again and of fighting in such good company. He had had some experience as a cowboy before coming to Washington, and from the moment war was declared had expressed his intention of joining the recruits for Cuba as soon as he could see her so provided for that his death would not rob her of proper support. How this had come about she did not know. Three weeks before he had been in despair over the faint prospect of doing what he wished. Then, suddenly and without any explanation of how the change had come about, he had rushed in upon her with the news that he was going to enlist in a company made up of broncho busters and rough riders from the west, that she need not worry about herself or about him, for he had just put $500 to her account in bank, and that as for himself he possessed a charmed life and was immune, as she well knew, and need fear bullets no more than the fever. By this he meant that he had had yellow fever years before in Louisiana and that a ball which had once been fired at him had gone clean through his body without taking his life.

"What was the date of the evening on which he told you he had placed money in bank for you?"

"April 29."

Two days after the Jeffrey-Moore wedding!

Convinced now that his departure from town was something more than a coincidence, I pursued my inquiries and found that he had been received, just as she had said, into the First volunteer corps under Colonel Wood. This required influence. Whose was the influence? It took me some time to find out, but after many and various attempts, most of which ended in failure, I succeeded in learning that the man who had worked and obtained for him a place in this favored corps was Francis Jeffrey.

CHAPTER XVIII.

I DID some tall thinking that night. I remembered that this man had held some conversation with the Jeffreys at their carriage door previous to their departure from the Moore house, and found myself compelled to believe that only a matter of importance to themselves as well as to him would have detained them at such a minute. Oh, that Tampa were not so far off or that I had happened on this clew earlier! But Tampa was at that moment a far prospect for me, and I could only reason from such facts as I had been able to collect in Washington.

Fixing my mind now on Mrs. Jeffrey, I asked the cause of the many caprices which had marked her conduct on her wedding morning. Why had she persisted in dressing alone, and what occasioned the absorption which led to her ignoring all appeals at her door at a time when a woman is supposed to be more than usually gracious? But one answer suggested itself. Her heart was not in her marriage and that last hour of her maidenhood had been an hour of anguish and struggle. Perhaps she not only failed to love Francis Jeffrey, but loved some other man. This seemed improbable, but things as strange as this have happened in our complex society, and no reckoning can be made with a woman's fancy. If this was so—and what other theory would better or even so well account for her peculiar behavior both then and afterward?

The hour usually given by brides to dress and gladsome expectation was with her one of farewell to past hopes and an unfortunate if not passionate attachment. No wonder that she wished to be alone. No wonder that interruption angered her. Perhaps it had found her on her knees. Perhaps—Here I felt myself seized by a strong and sudden excitement. I remembered the filings I had gathered up from the small stand by the window, filings which had glittered and which must have been of gold. What was the conclusion? In this last hour of her maiden life she had sought to rid herself of some article of jewelry which she found it undesirable to carry into her new life. What article of jewelry? In consideration of the circumstances and the hour I could think of but one—a ring, the symbol of some old attachment.

The slight abrasion at the base of her third finger, which had been noted upon as the result of too rough and speedy a withdrawing of the wedding ring on the evening of her death, was much more likely to have been occasioned by the reopening of some little wound made two weeks before by the file. If Durbin and the rest had taken into account these filings, they must have come to very much the same conclusion, but either they had overlooked them in their search about the place or, having noted them, regarded them as a clew leading nowhere.

But for me they led the way to a very definite inquiry. Asking to see the rings Mrs. Jeffrey had left behind her on the night she went for the last time to the Moore house, I looked them carefully over and found that none of them showed the least mark of the file. This strengthened my theory, and I proceeded to take my next step with increased confidence. It seemed an easy one, but proved unexpectedly difficult. My desire was to ascertain whether she had worn previous to her marriage any rings which had not been seen on her finger since, and it took me one whole week to establish the fact that she had.

But that fact once learned, the way cleared before me. Allowing my fancy full rein, I pictured to myself her anxious figure standing alone in that ancient and ghostly room filing off this old ring from her dainty finger. Then I asked myself what she would be likely to do with this ring after disengaging it from her hand? Would she keep it? Perhaps. But, if so, why could it not be found? None such had been discovered among her effects. Or had she thrown it away, and if so, where? The vision of her which I had just seen in my mind's eye came out with a clearness at this, which struck me as providential. I could discern as plainly as if I had been a part of the scene the white clad form of the bride bending toward the light which came in sparsely through the half open shutter she had loosened for this task. This was the shutter which had never again been fastened and whose restless blowing to and fro had first led attention to this house and the crime it might otherwise have concealed indefinitely. Had some glimpse of the rank grass growing underneath this window lured her eye and led her to cast away the ring which she had no longer any right to keep? It would be like a woman to yield to such an impulse, and on the strength of the possibility I decided to search this small plot for what it might very reasonably conceal.

Calling together a posse of street urchins, I organized them into a band, with the promise of a good supper all around if one of them brought me the pieces of a broken ring which I had lost in the grass plot of a house where I had been called upon to stay all night. That they might win the supper in the shortest possible time and before the owner of this house, who lived opposite, could interfere, I advised them to start at the fence in a long line and, proceeding on their knees, to search, each one, the ground before him to the width of his own body. The fortunate one was to have the privilege of saying what the supper should consist of. To give a plausible excuse for this search a ball was to be tossed up and down the street till it lighted in the Moore house inclosure.

I did not accompany them. Jinny, who has such an innocent air on the street, took my place and promenaded up and down the block just to see that Mr. Moore did not make too much trouble. And it was well she did so, for though he was not at home—I had chosen the hour of his afternoon ride—his new manservant was, and he no sooner perceived this crowd of urchins making for the opposite house than he rushed at them and would have scattered them far and wide in a twinkling if the demure dimples of my little ally had not come into play and distracted his attention so completely as to make him forget the throng of unkempt hoodlums who seemed bound to invade his master's property. She was looking for Mr. Moore's house, she told him. Did he know Mr. Moore and his house, which was somewhere near, not his new, great, big house, where the horrible things took place of which she had read in the papers, but his little old house, which she had heard was soon to be for rent and which she thought would be just the right size for herself and mother. Was that it? That dear little place all smothered in vines? How lovely! And what would the rent be, did he think, and had it a back yard with garden room enough for her to raise pinks and nasturtiums, and so on, and so on, while he stared with delighted eyes and tried to put in a word edgewise, and the boys—well, they went through that strip of grass in fast ten minutes. My brave little Jinny had just declared with her most roguish smile that she would run home and tell her mother all about this sweetest of sweet little places when a shout rose from the other side of the street, and that collection of fifteen or twenty boys scampered away as if mad, shouting in joyous echo of the boy at their head:

"It's to be chicken, heaping plates of ice cream and sponge cake."

By which token she knew that the ring had been found.

* * * * * * * *

When they brought this ring to me I would not have exchanged places with any man on earth. As Jinny herself was curious enough to stroll along about this time, I held it out where we both could see it and draw our conclusions.

It was a plain gold circlet set with a single small ruby. It was cut through and twisted out of shape just as I had anticipated. How could I learn the story of that ring and the possible connection between it and Mr. Jeffrey's professed jealousy of his wife and the disappointing honeymoon which had followed their marriage? That this feeling on his part had antedated the ambassador's ball no one could question, but that it had started as far back as the wedding day was a new idea to me, and one which suggested many possibilities. Could this idea be established, and if so how? But one avenue of inquiry offered itself. The waiter, who had been spirited away so curiously immediately after the wedding, might be able to give us some information on this interesting point. He had been the medium of the messages which had passed between her and Mr. Jeffrey just prior to the ceremony; afterward he had been seen talking earnestly to that gentleman and later with her. Certainly it would add to our understanding of the situation to know what reply she had sent to the peremptory demand made upon her at so critical a time—an understanding so desirable that the very prospect of it was almost enough to warrant a journey to Tampa. Yet, say that the results were disappointing, how much time lost and what a sum of money! I felt the need of advice in this crisis, yet hesitated to ask it. My cursed pride and my no less cursed jealousy of Durbin stood very much in my way at this time.

A week had now passed since the inquest, and while Miss Tuttle still remained at liberty it was a circumscribed liberty which must have been very galling to one of her temperament and habits. She rode and she walked, but she entered no house unattended nor was she allowed any communication with Mr. Jeffrey. Nevertheless she saw him or at least gave him the opportunity of seeing her. Each day at 3 o'clock she rode through K street, and the detective who watched Mr. Jeffrey's house said that she never passed it without turning her face to the second story window, where he invariably stood. No signs passed between them—indeed they scarcely nodded—but her face as she lifted it to meet his eye showed so marked a serenity and was so altogether beautiful that this same detective had a desire to see if it maintained like characteristics when she was not within reach of her brother-in-law. Accordingly the next day he delegated his place to another and took his stand farther down the street. Alas, it was not the same woman's face he saw, but a far different and sadder one. She wore that look of courage and brave hope only in passing Mr. Jeffrey's house. Was it simply an expression of her secret devotion to him, or the signal of some compact which had been entered into between them?

Whichever it was, it touched my heart even in his description of it. After advising with Jinny, I approached the superintendent, to whom without further reserve I opened my heart.

The next day I found myself on the train bound for Tampa, with full authority to follow Curly Jim until I found him.

CHAPTER XIX.

WHEN I started on this desperate search after a witness, war had been declared, but no advance as yet ordered on Cuba. I wandered from one end of the camp to the other till I finally encountered a petty officer who gave signs of being a rough rider. Him I stopped and, with some hint of my business, asked where James Calvert could be found.

His answer was a stare and a gesture toward the hospital tents.

Nothing could have astonished me more.

"Sick?" I cried.

"Dying," was his answer.

Dying! Curly Jim! Impossible! I had misled my informant as to the exact man I wanted, or else there were two James Calverts in Tampa. Curly Jim, the former cowboy, was not the fellow to succumb in camp before he had ever smelt powder.

"It is James Calvert of the First volunteer corps I am after," said I. "A sturdy fellow"—

"No doubt, no doubt. Many sturdy fellows are down. He's down to stay. Typhoid, you know. Bad case. No hope from the start. Pity, but"—

I heard no more. Dying! Curly Jim! He who was considered to be immune. He who held the secret—

"Let me see him," I demanded. "It is important—a police matter. A word from him may save a life. He is still breathing?"

"Yes, but I do not think there is any chance of his speaking. He did not recognize his nurse five minutes ago."

As bad as that! But I did not despair. I did not dare to. I had staked everything on this interview, and I was not going to lose its promised results from any lack of effort on my own part.

"Let me see him," I repeated.

I was taken in. The few persons I saw clustered about a narrow cot in one corner gave way, and I was cut to the heart to see that they did this not so much out of consideration for me or my errand there as from the consciousness that their business at the bedside of this dying man was over. He was on the point of breathing his last. I pressed forward, and after one quick scrutiny of the closed eyes and pale face I knelt at his side and whispered a name into his ear. It was that of Veronica Moore.

The petty officer

He started. They all saw it. On the threshold of death, some emotion—we never knew what one—drew him back for an instant, and the pale cheek showed a suspicion of color. Though the eyes did not open, the lips moved, and I caught these words:

"Kept word—told no one—she was so"—

And that was all. He died the next instant.

Bending under this stroke of Providence, I passed out. A little boy was sobbing at the tent door. I stared at him curiously and was hurrying on when I felt myself caught by the hand.

"Take me with you," cried a choked and frightened voice in my ear. "I have no friend here now he is gone. Take me back to Washington."

Washington! I turned and looked at the lad, who, kneeling in the hot sand at the door of the tent, was clutching me with imploring hands.

"Who are you?" I asked, "and how came you here? Do you belong to the army?"

"I helped care for his horse," he whispered. "He found me smuggled on board the train—for I was bound to go to war—and he was sorry for me and used to give me bits of his own rations, but—but now no one will give me anything. Take me back; she won't care. She's dead, they say. Besides, I wouldn't stay here now if she was alive and breathing. I have had enough of war since he— Oh, he was good to me—I never cared for any one so much."

I looked at the boy with an odd sensation for which I have no name.

"Whom are you talking about?" I asked. "Your mother—your sister?"

"Oh, no!" The tone was simplicity itself. "Never had no mother. I mean the lady at the big house; the one that was married. She gave me money to

CAMPAIGN KEYNOTES

Timely Comment On Live Issues By Pennsylvania Editors.

ROOSEVELT AND PATRIOTISM

Good Republican Thoughts For the Closing Days of the Canvass In Pennsylvania.

The editors of Republican newspapers in Pennsylvania continue to lead the fighting in the presidential campaign. Their editorial expressions are being widely quoted, and the Republican national committee has made free use of this matter in the campaign of education which is being waged in all of the doubtful states. Here are a few recent editorial utterances from the state press:

Cannon Points the Danger.

As to the Parker plea that the Democratic free trade plank cannot do any harm, because the Democrats have not the power to change the tariff, Speaker Cannon said in a speech at South Bend, Ind., the other night: "Suppose the country takes Mr. Parker at his word. It would be equivalent to giving notice to the country, unless there is a change of sentiment, that at the end of two years the opposition would come into full power. We discount the future. The manufacturer will say, 'I will not produce and trust to the future.' The retailer will say: 'I will buy carefully; notice has been served that we are to have a change of policy.' The farmer will say for the same reason, 'I will buy less; I will set my house in order.' Everybody draws in sails."—Lancaster Morning News.

Get Ready For Salt River!

A boat large enough to carry six persons may be carried in a trunk or valise. This is because the principle of the pneumatic tire has been applied with much success to boat building. Every Democrat should carry such a boat around with him to have it handy for his trip up Salt River the day after election.—Norristown Herald.

They Know Fairbanks Now.

One of the surprises of the present campaign is the way Senator Fairbanks has grown into the respect and affection of the people. Never for a moment surrendering the dignity of his position, he is a good mixer, and the people are glad to meet him and he is glad to meet the people.—Johnstown Tribune.

Confidence Has Returned.

The Marshall furnace at Newport and the Newport Extract Works, after a long shut-down, resume this week. With the certainty of President Roosevelt's election confidence has returned and prosperity will continue.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

Business Is Promising.

Despite the efforts of Democratic organs, who in order to gain a political point would paralyze trade for the season if possible, business has never been as promising during a presidential campaign as this year.—Scranton Tribune.

Dreams of the Democracy.

One by one the day dreams of Pennsylvania Democrats are dissipated. They have dropped from the effort to get an additional congressman or two to an attempt to break into the state legislature.—Pittsburg Gazette.

Democrats Very Hungry.

Republicans should not allow themselves to become indifferent believing that Republican victory is assured. Democrats always vote—and they are very hungry.—Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin.

Why You Don't Shout.

If there is a lack of enthusiasm in the present presidential campaign you have only yourself to blame. You don't shout because you believe Roosevelt has a walkover.—Chester Republican.

What Democratic Success Means.

Tariff reduction can mean but one thing to the workingmen and business men of this nation—idleness, and its horrible train of want and suffering.—Mt. Carmel Daily News.

Roosevelt Stumped the Democracy.

There has been no quarrel among Democrats for the privilege of answering the questions to the party propounded in President Roosevelt's letter.—Reading Herald.

Famine and Incendiarism.

St. Petersburgh, Oct. 13.—Disquieting rumors arrived from the Trans-Baikal district. The army, on the way to the front, seems to have consumed everything in the way of food, and as there were three very bad harvests in succession, the peasants are on the verge of starvation. Even people who have some money left are unable to buy flour. In many villages bread has become a rarity. The peasants are selling their horses and agricultural implements, preparing to move away. Incendiarism is spreading in all the big towns, particularly in those largely devoted to industry under normal condition. Now that all factories are closed and the number out of work grows daily, discontent reigns among the workmen, and it is charged that they commit incendiarism "merely to get even with the well-to-do classes. Besides great fires always offer opportunity for disorder and thefts." The above is quoted from official sources.

Extending the Loan.

Old Mr. Dobson was nothing if not neighborly, but in the case of the Perkinses he really felt that a line must be drawn somewhere. It was the fifth time that week that little Sammy Perkins had been over to borrow something, and this was only Wednesday.

"Please, Mr. Dobson, mother says won't you lend her your lawn mower for about an hour or two?"

Mr. Dobson scratched his head, dubiously. "Well, sonny, 'deed I can't" he said at last. "I'll be needing it now straight through the summer, off and on. But I'll tell you what," he added, when he saw the youngster's downcast countenance. "There's the snow shovel she borrowed last January; I'll let her keep that a bit longer."—Youth's Companion.

A Young Unmarried Couple in Sad Plight.

Philadelphia, Oct. 14.—Threatened with deportation unless they marry, a young English couple who came across the Atlantic ocean as man and wife are detained here pending the result of an appeal to the immigration bureau at Washington. The case is an interesting one, and a strong effort is being made in behalf of the couple. They arrived here from Liverpool on the steamship Westernland Sunday, accompanied by the young woman's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Fay of New York city. As is the case on most ships single men and single women are quartered in different parts of the Westernland, and as the young woman wanted to travel with her relatives, it was agreed among them at Liverpool that the young woman was to represent herself as the wife of Hugh Stanton, a mutual friend, who also has engaged passage on the steamship. No harm was thought of the suggestion and the arrangement insured them getting quarters together. During the trip Mrs. Fay and her niece occupied the same berth, while Stanton and Fay slept together.

When the vessel reached here the immigration officials discovered the deception and threatened to deport the couples unless they agree to be married at once. As the young woman is engaged to marry a young man, who has arranged to join her in America, and as Stanton is also engaged to an other girl, the suggestion of marriage was rejected by both of them.

Copper-Producing Districts of the United States.

Mr. Walter Harvey Weed, in a recent number of the Mining Magazine, gives the following interesting facts: The production of metallic copper in the United States for 1903 was 698,044,517 pounds of a value of $91,506,006. In 1902, 44 per cent., or about 280 million pounds, were produced from an area a mile long and one-half mile wide, at Butte, Montana; 26 per cent., or about 156 million pounds, from a strip of country two to six miles long, extending through the center of Keweenaw Peninsula, Michigan; and 18 per cent., or 130 million pounds, from four isolated districts in Arizona; of the remaining 12 per cent. the greater amount comes from Bingham, Utah; Keswick, Cal., and Ducktown, Tenn The gold and silver mines of the country, notably those of Colorado, contribute about one per cent. of the total production which is obtained as a by-product in smelting for the precious metals.

Of the six largest mines in the world four are in the United States, the Anaconda mine of Butte itself furnishing one-seventh of the entire world's supply of copper, and the Calumet and Hecla nearly one-eighth.

Doan's Kidney Pills did this for me when other remedies had failed. Whenever I feel any symptom of my old trouble I send to F. DON'T BE WOOZY!

NERO

was a most crafty Roman, but he made one mistake.

He committed suicide at the wrong end of his life.

He should have shuffled off at the beginning.

A great many business men today are committing business suicide at the wrong end of their lives.

They mean well at the start, but drift away from their good resolutions.

One means or a long and prosperous business life is to have good printing and stationery.

A business is judged by its printed matter.

THE REPUBLICAN

Job Printing Department is prepared to furnish the best.

Cost is a secondary consideration when you consider the quality—sufficient it is to say our prices are so reasonable that it would be a waste of shoe leather to look further.

It has a distinctiveness all its own—a something that distinguishes it from the common trash of the ordinary shop.

Again we say:

"Don't be Woozy."

Think it over and for your next order, remember the

WHY A CHANGE?

Will any of our political opponents give us a good, sane and sensible reason why there should be a change in the National, State, Congressional, Senatorial and Centre County Judicial administrations?

We say will they, or can they give us a single sane, or sensible reason? True enough, they are strenuously belaboring themselves to give this and that reason for a change, but so far they have not come within a thousand miles of a sane or sensible reason. All their efforts land in the old trough of "we want and advocate a change because we want to get in and therefore we want you out." That is the sum and substance of all their efforts, but the people will have something to say about such a procedure.

About the only pretended reason the opposition has been able to bolster up so far against Judge Love is that ten years is long enough for any man on the bench. Now, isn't that one of the flimsiest and silliest arguments you ever heard? If that argument was of any virtue why hasn't it been employed long ago in Clinton county, where Judge Mayer is now serving his fourth term of ten years each? If ten years is long enough in Centre why shouldn't it be in Clinton where Judge Mayer will soon have served for forty years consecutively? Oh! but that is where the rub comes in. Mayer is a Democrat and of course ten, twenty, thirty, forty and even a hundred years would not be too long for a Democrat, because the Democratic politician is never content until he is in office and can stay there as long as he lives, and a day or two longer if possible.

Not one single truthful word derogatory to Judge Love's official career has the opposition been able to bring out. He has been strictly impartial in all his judicial procedure; he has dispatched court business on an economical and strictly fair basis and saved the county thousands upon thousands of dollars by doing so, the people of Centre county have tried him and found him wanting in not a single respect.

Then why a change?

In looking over the number of reversals of cases taken to the superior and supreme courts of the State from Centre and adjoining counties where Judge Love has been holding court, we find that he has a smaller percentage of reversals than any judge in the state.

Then why a change?

Why exchange a certainty for an uncertainty? Judge Love has been found reliable in every respect and gives dignity to the Centre county courts all over the Commonwealth. Mr. Orvis, his opponent, may be a nice young man in his way but he has a good ways to go in either age or experience before he can cope with the present judge of our courts. In other words, Judge Love has been thoroughly tried and not found wanting, while that cannot be said concerning the career of Mr. Orvis. He has as yet to be tried and it might prove an extremely expensive trial for the taxpayers to undertake this step at this time.

Then why a change?

It is far better to let well enough alone, and from all present indications that is just what a majority of the people of Centre county propose to do on November 8th, next.

They are not ready for a change at this time, and this is a most sensible conclusion at which to arrive, just now. Don't you think so?

STRONGER THAN BEFORE,

The election of Republican candidates this year is important. Some may be importuned to give a complimentary vote to the opposition on some plea and they may consider the request, thinking the lower house of congress is safely Republican and cannot be changed this year. The view is wrong. This is a large country and a little gain in each of a few states would be sufficient to give the Democrats control. In our own district there is no occasion for warning, but there are some districts in this state which need every Republican vote belonging to them this year. Mr. Dresser, our own candidate, will have a much larger majority than he had two years ago. His service has been such that his record will bring him votes. Two years ago he was with out this record. He has been a very painstaking congressman No body in his district ever wrote to him on a proper subject who did not get an immediate reply, if the correspondence did not miscarry, and all the subsequent attention from Mr. Dresser that the situation required. He has applied the correct principles and commonsense methods of business and the people of the district have not been put off and cajoled by him to avoid meeting a situation. He is frank and prompt in his dealings and the public likes a man who can be found, and his position on any subject located. These are some of the many excellent qualities of a public man that will largely increase his majority this fall.

Sweeping changes in a tariff will be fatal in any event. They would be absolutely ruinous if approached on the basis that the protective tariff is to be abandoned.

Democrats are naturally disgruntled because the United States paid cash instead of bonds for the Panama Canal. Democrats fatten on bond issues.

The London Telegraph recently described free trade as "the process of paying for the razor which cut your own throat."

Do you remember how the Democrats contended in 1896 that tin plate could not be manufactured in this country?

Death of Mrs. Catherine Jennings.

Mrs. Catherine Jennings, an old resident of this place, died Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. James Conroy at Philadelphia. She was about 78 years of age and was the widow of the late William Jennings, of this place. She has been making her home with her daughter in Philadelphia for the last few years. She is survived by two children Thomas, of Mannington, West Virginia and Mrs. Conroy.

She was a life long member of St Johns' Catholic church. The remains will arrive here Thursday evening at 8:16 and the funeral will be held Friday morning from the Catholic church.

LABOR FOR ROOSEVELT

President Popular With Wage-Earners Throughout the Country.

HAS SHOWN INTEREST IN THEM

Continuance of the Nation, He Believes, Depends Upon the Prosperity of the Workingmen.

[Special Correspondence.]

Harrisburg, Oct. 18.

One of the reasons why Chairman Penrose, of the Republican state committee, is so confident of polling a record-breaking majority for Roosevelt this fall is the unusual interest taken in the campaign by the vast army of wage earners of this state, who look upon the president as their particular friend and champion.

Probably no other candidate for the presidency ever enjoyed the enthusiastic support of labor which is being given Theodore Roosevelt in the present campaign. This condition of affairs is based not only upon his official acts since he came into public life, but upon his personal interest shown on many occasions in the welfare of the workingmen. He has not played the part of the demagogue, which many politicians who start out to get the so-called labor vote seem to think they must do. He has invariably shown that he recognizes the fact that the stability of this republic must depend upon the great army of workers who make possible the great industrial and business development that is witnessed throughout the United States.

All the schemes and artful tactics of the Democrats in this campaign to array the "labor vote" against the Republican ticket, especially in the closely-contested congressional districts, have been signal failures.

A few corrupt labor leaders may have been subsidized here and there to send out campaign literature in the interest of the Democracy, but the vast army of voters among the industrial, manufacturing, agricultural and business interests of the nation will be with Roosevelt and his party at the coming election.

Union labor and those not identified with any organization are of one mind in their support of the Republican party in this campaign. There is nothing either in the Democratic platform or the records of the Democratic candidates that appeals to the workingmen.

The editor of the Labor World, of Pittsburg, in commenting upon the candidacy of President Roosevelt a few days ago, said:

"It is, indeed, difficult to perceive why any trade unionist, or, in fact, wage workers in general should be opposed to Theodore Roosevelt in his candidature for the presidency of the country. Sound objections are not discernable either from a standpoint of logic or expediency. Since George Washington first became the executive head of the country right up to the death of McKinley, labor has not had a better friend at the head of the nation than Theodore Roosevelt. It is extremely problematical as to whether or not he has had an equal in this respect.

"Organized labor has ever been demanding equality; a fair show in the race. This has always been the dominant cry of trade unionism. No man as executive head of the nation has done more toward establishing this equality than President Roosevelt."

Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, has been visiting the manufacturing centres of the country, and has had among his audiences many thousands of workingmen, and his remarks have invariably been applauded vigorously. In one of his recent speeches he made these timely statements:

"The Democratic party has always assumed that the one requisite to human happiness and prosperity is cheap living expenses. The Republican party, on the contrary, has always urged the importance of high-priced products, whether that product be a day's work or the result of a day's work. The Democrats promise the best market in the world in which to buy, and we promise the best market in the world in which to sell. Both have been signally successful in bringing about the promised conditions.

"Every time the Democratic party has had control of both houses of congress or the presidency it has reduced the price of food and clothes and wages to a minimum, and the Republican party has never had control without enlarging the American market, both for wages and the product of wages. The Democratic party always advocated the open door in America, as well as in Asia, and it assumes that if the United States will swing its doors wide open, then the world will emulate our generosity. Democrats express their theories of reciprocity after this manner:

"If we will give the world its share of our trade, then the world will grant us our share of its trade. This sounds very sweet, but before we consummate the exchange we had better inquire what the world's market is worth. The aggregate export of the world's market is about $10,000,000,000. Thus the Democratic party, in effect, says: Give the world its share of our $20,000,000,000 domestic trade, and we can get our share of the world's $10,000,000,000 export trade.

KERR NOT A CANDIDATE

Democratic Conferees will Meet to Get Another Man.

The Clearfield Republican, the personal organ of Hon. James Kerr, says that Mr. Kerr declines to stand as the Democratic candidate for State Senator in this district and that his nomination was a misunderstanding It is evident that the plan of the Democrats was to force the nomination on Mr. Kerr against his expressed wishes, but that gentleman positively refuses to be a party to the scheme, so another victim will have to be pressed into service. The Republican, the editor of which is the leader of the Democratic organization in Clearfield county and said to be largely responsible for the Kerr nomination, says:

The written declination of the Hon James Kerr of the senatorial nomination conferred upon him by the Democratic conference at Bellefonte three weeks ago, was mailed from London, England, last week and will be filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth in a day or two.

The conferees of the three counties, Centre, Clinton and Clearfield, will be convened again and another nomination made.

Mr. Kerr does not expect to reach home before Oct. 27.

From letters received by Mr. Kerr's friends since he arrived in England it is clear he felt that he had impressed the fact upon those he discussed the senatorial question with, just before his departure, that he could not possibly accept the honor as this time.

What Mr. Kerr said on the subject to his friends in Centre county and at home was said in such manner that they thought he would not decline if the nomination came to him unsolicited and from Centre and Clinton counties.

The situation as it now exists, or the absence of a situation is therefore simply the result of a misunderstanding all around and as the declination required by law will soon be here, the only thing left to do is for the Democrats to make another nomination.

A MILD WINTER.

Weather Prophet Tells of the Coming Winter.

For years Abraham Strauseer, of Bloomsburg has made a study of the weather, wind, and the moon to such an extent that he has become a successful weather prognosticator. For years he has foretold what the coming seasons would be like and it is seldom that his prophecy has been wrong. Strausser says that the winter is regulated by the wind on the 29th of September. When the wind is from the north the winter will be long and cold. When it is from the east there will be a great deal of snow. When the winds are variable the winter will be open and sloppy, and wind from the south and west indicate a mild winter. The wind on the above date came continually from the south and west without a particle of variation, and you can put it down that we will have a mild winter, with little snow. There will be no sleighing before Christmas. Last year the wind blew directly from the north and the winter was severe and long. Strausser claims he has not missed foretelling the weather for many years.

Howard Creamery Burned.

The new creamery, owned by David Wilson at Howard, was destroyed by fire Thursday night. Mr. Wilson suffered the loss of his creamery a few weeks ago and had just completed the erection of a new one completed in every way and had intended to commence operation next Monday. It is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. This is the third time this creamery has burned within a period of about eighteen months. It is not known whether there was any insurance. At the time of the former fires therew as but a small insurance.

Will the Poor Always Be Blind.

In a Kansas paper, Socialist in philosophy, appear these words: "One free lodging house in New York City fed and housed forty-one thousand out of employment men since the first of the year. A majority of the inmates are men of middle age who are able to work—men who want work but can not get it.

The average age of these men is forty-one years.

This is the sort of prosperity which the great mass of mankind votes for—homeless men, men willing to work. Houseless in a great city teeming with millions of dollars of wealth. I wonder if men will always be so blind?" On reading these lines, a woman in Connecticut writes indignantly to a newspaper that in the country, where she lives—"back from the railroads, no saloons"—there is plenty of work, good beds, good food, and good wages, with men in constantly greater demand than supply, winter as well as summer. Undoubtedly, it is in the cities that subversive tendencies have their strength, and it is in the farming districts, in every country, that the present order of things has its surest protection. The farmer and the farm hand work hard for what they get, but they live, and they have an independence and hard sense which remove them immeasurably from utopias. They would remedy discriminations and unfair privileges. They are the strongest supporters of moderate reformers like FOLK and LA FOLLETTE. But very few of them share those crass notions of creating a new universe which usually have their breeding grounds in city slums. Collier's for October 15.

A priceless Gift of Rare Beauty.

Mrs. T. I. Allabach, of Lock Haven, has received by mail from C. B. Lucas, formerly of Bellefonte, but now in the service of "Uncle Sam," on board the United States battleship Wisconsin, cruising near Japan, a beautiful mother of pearl brooch, with Japanese dancing girls engraved thereon. Mrs. Allabach prizes her gift very highly both on account of its intrinsic value and the rarity of design and distance from which it came. Since the present arrived Mrs. Allabach has received a letter from the donor of this priceless gift in which he states that he is just now convalescent in a goverment in the city of Yokohama, Japan.

REPUBLICAN SHRAPNEL

Hot Shot For the Democracy From State Editorial Batteries.

OPPOSITION IS AN EASY TARGET

The Press of Pennsylvania Gallantly Fighting For Roosevelt and the Whole Republican Ticket.

The stalwart Republican newspapers of Pennsylvania continue to be an important factor in the campaign in this state. They are letting no opportunity pass them to score on the Democracy, and their editorial pages are filled with timely shots at the opposition. Here are a few of the latest:

Educate the Voters.

From this time forward, the political meeting will be one of the chief features of the campaign. The Republican party has always been a firm believer in this kind of popular education. It is a party of principles and ideas and is not afraid to go before the voters on the issues for which it stands, realizing that the better they are understood the more readily they will be adopted by the man who is honestly desirous of doing his highest duty with the ballot it is his privilege to cast.

The political mass meeting is one of the means the Republican party adopts to give the voter an opportunity of ascertaining just what the party represents in each campaign and at the same time brings him face to face with the candidate he is asked to support, with a view to carrying out the party's principles and policies. The voter can thus get some idea of the manner of man who is asking for his vote.—Scranton Truth.

Corporation Men to the Front.

Regarding the action of the Democratic party in choosing some of the wealthiest corporation men of the country to form its executive board, the Review of Reviews for September says: "Thus, all of a sudden, from being the poor man's party the Democracy has become the most dazzlingly plutocratic organization any country has ever known." No wonder thousands of Democrats in every state are flocking to the Republican standard.—Crawford County Journal.

This Holds Good in Every District.

With President Roosevelt in the White House and a Republican majority in congress, of what earthly use will a Democratic congressman from this district be to his constituents? He will sit there and draw his salary, cast his vote as his bosses dictate, which will always be against the interests of the miner, laborer or mechanic. If you have no higher motive, self-interest alone should prompt you to vote for Dr. Samuel.—Columbia County Republican.

Sound Advice From Penrose.

Senator Penrose's advice in a New York interview not to be over confident but to work hard is always good advice in a political campaign. It is the Pennsylvania way. The Republican majority in this state is assured and large, but work goes on all the time just the same as if it were not.—Lewistown Free Press.

Another Spike in Democratic Pessimism

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has awarded contracts for 600 steel hopper coal cars, and in its own shops it will build eighty passenger coaches and twenty-five locomotives. This indicates a revival of business in railroad lines and is one more spike in Democratic pessimism.—Chester Republican.

"Big Sticks" of This Campaign.

The Democrats allude to this as the "Big Stick" campaign. The only big "sticks" we know of in this campaign are Parker and Davis. In fact, they remind us somewhat of ten-pins. Set up by the Democrats only to be bowled over by the Republicans at the polls in November.—Norristown Herald.

"Rachel Goldstein."

There is a tender heart interest and thrilling excitement in "Rachel Goldstein, or The Struggles of a Poor Girl in New York," which is announced for presentation by A. H. Woods at Garman's Opera House on Monday evening Oct. 24, This new play is from the pen of Theodore Kremer, and tells the story of a young Yiddish girl, who, in emigrating to America with her father, meets with many startling adventures. In the end the girl develops into an accomplished and beautiful young woman and marries the man of her choice. In the play there is a storm at sea, a thrilling murder, a horse-whipping scene, and the sensational death of the female villain. These exciting incidents are relieved by comedy, which is really funny, and a love story which is so true and sincere that it goes at once to the hearts of the audience. The scenic effects are on an unusually elaborate scale, and include a sensational storm at sea, Long Acre Square by night, the steerage deck of the S. S. "Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse," Hester Street, the front of the Hoffman House and the famous Flatiron Building.

State Farmers at State College.

State Board of Agriculture held Wednesday's session at State College. S. S. McClellen, of Knox, and Joel A. Herr, of Cedar Springs, were the presiding officers. The principal addresses were delivered by Dr. Leonard Pearson, Prof. Wells W. Cooke, Mr. Alva McGee, Rev. J. D. Detrich, Prof. R. L. Watts and Mr. T. I. Mairs.

FOOTPRINTS IN STONE.

Nine Well Defined Marks Found Twenty Feet Below Surface.

Tunkhannock, Oct, 15.—Workmen at Dales quarry, Lathrop township, Wyoming county, in removing a "lift" of stone about four inches thick, found the impression of nine well-defined footprints across the slab. The feet are large and roughly shaped, but the impressions are distinct, and are said to resemble those of the human foot, which is quite likely, as the well known fossil footprints of reptilian life of the coal age do not look unlike human handprints and footprints. The rock was found twenty feet below the surface, the entire covering being rock. The quarrymen have saved the slab in the hope that it will prove salable to museums.

Dems in this District Are in a Pretty Pickle.

The Democrats of the 34th senatorial district are not sure whether they have a candidate for state senator or not. Hon. James Kerr declines to accept the nomination, but it appears that the leaders of the party are unwilling to accept his declination as final. According to some accounts it is stated that his name will go on the ticket regardless of his refusal to run against Col. Irvin, the Republican candidate. The Democratic Clearfield Spirit is disposed to take Mr. Kerr at his word and has no faith in the gossip of his remaining in the field. The Spirit says:

On Monday, October 3, Albert Kerr of New York city, son of James Kerr, wired Lieut. Fred Kerr at Clearfield, that he had filed his father's sworn refusal of the Democratic nomination in the Thirty-fourth senatorial district. This settles any further gossip in that direction. This is a very unfortunate and discouraging "mix up" at that time when Democratic success was assured both in Centre and Clearfield counties. The worst of it all is that the Republicans and the active Prohibitionists are poking fun at Democrats in our sore dilemma.

Raced From Funeral to File Rival Wills.

Butler, Oct. 14—There was a race from the funeral of Miss Martha Amberson, a rich spinster of Forward township to get her two wills filed for probate.

The first will, dated December 2, 1903, was hardly in the office before the later one, dated October 4, 1904, was brought in and Recorder Davis will hold a hearing to determine which shall be admitted to probate.

In the first will a number of bequests to churches, charities and relatives are made, and the residuary portion of the estate of $10,000 is left to attorney Frank Bowser and James Cooper, the executors, for their services and to be devoted to "such charitable and benevolent objects" as they, solely, shall determine. If any beneficiary contests this will it is provided that the bequest to that person shall go into the residuary portion.

The second will, which the beneficaries of the first allege was procured by undue influence, leaves the estate to a nephew and his daughter, deredent's grand niece, except a $500 church bequest.

Both documents are signed with the mark of the testator.

Philadelphia, Oct. 18.

With but three weeks left for campaigning, the voters of Pennsylvania have but little time to prepare for the election, which takes place on Tuesday, November 8

While much work has been done by the members of the Republican committees throughout the state, Chairman Penrose is urging all who take an active interest in the party organization to leave nothing undone to get every Republican to the polls that can be possibly got to vote.

On a visit to the White House a few days ago Senator Penrose told President Roosevelt that Pennsylvania will give him a greater majority than has ever been given to a presidential candidate, and the president expressed himself as greatly pleased with this report. In order to make good his prediction, Senator Penrose has appealed to the rank and file of the organization in every county to take the McKinley vote as their guide and seek to exceed it in every voting precinct.

Already plans are being made by young Republicans to participate at President Roosevelt's inauguration, and it is the wish of all who hope to be present that Pennsylvania shall be able to carry on their banners the announcement that the Keystone State gave Roosevelt the largest Republican majority in her history.

Not only is it desired that Roosevelt's majority shall be the greatest on record, but the aim of the party leaders is to have Pennsylvania continue to have the largest Republican delegation in congress. This cannot be done without the hearty co-operation of the Republican voters generally. Following next November's election there is to be a great future for the active Republicans of Pennsylvania, and all who wish to share in the glory of the triumph and to be a part of the great victorious hosts who will celebrate the election of Roosevelt on November 8 should begin now to enroll themselves for the struggle at the polls and to earn the honor of having contributed to the grand result.

Colonel Wesley R. Andrews, secretary of the Republican state committee, is authority for the statement that never before in his many years of connection with the organization have there been so many young men taking a hand in the campaign work.

Every Republican should inform himself regarding the issues of the campaign, so that he can intelligently discuss them with the doubtful voters or Democratic neighbors. Editor E. B. McKee, of the Reporter-Journal and Bradford Republican, in reviewing the situation a few days ago said:

"Thus far there is no indication that the Democratic party has made any progress towards diminishing the Republican majority given at the last presidential election. The divisions in the Democratic party which have been fatal to its success continue. One Democratic leader wants a tariff for revenue only, another dreads any proposal to disturb existing industrial conditions; one wishes to make an immediate promise of independence to the Philippines; another is equally certain that any proposal to haul down the flag will be unpopular; one lays stress on the demand of the platform for increasing the power of the interstate commerce commission; another on Judge Parker's affirmation that new legislation is necessary.

"One year the party is for free silver; another year silence. One year free trade; another year protection with tariff revision trimmings. It has no definite principle, no defined policy; simply a consuming hunger for the spoils of office and a chronic habit of condemning what others do. No one knows what they will do if they regain power; and it is this doubt that makes business interests timid and the people afraid to entrust them with the control of the government."

The Bryan speeches are not helping Parker. One of Tom Watson's supporters said:

"It is singular how Bryan has lost the respect of his once ardent followers. His support of Parker has not influence a single man in the east who was his supporter in his two campaigns. Bryan's followers have lost faith in him, because they now question his sincerity. I do not think that Parker has a ghost of a chance."

One of Many.

H. A. Tisdale, of Summerton, S. C., suffered for twenty years with the piles. Specialists were employed and many remedies used but relief and permanent good was found only in the use of De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. This is only one of the many, many cures that have been effected by this wonderful remedy. In buying Witch Hazel Salve it is only necessary to see that you get the genuine DeWitt's, made by E. C. DeWitt & Co. in Chicago, and a cure is certain. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures all kinds of piles, cuts, burns, bruises, eczema, tetter, ring-worm, skin diseases, etc. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

Making an Impression.

"I have applied for a position in a dozen newspaper offices and half that many stores," said the young man who was standing at the desk. "No one will listen to me. I can't get a hearing. I need work very badly. The best I have been able to get is. 'We have nothing for you; good morning' I'm discouraged."

And here is what the man behind the desk said. It is not the essence of wisdom, just simple, hard sense; a lesson learned by rubbing up against a busy world, that has little time for sentiment and none to waste on lazy folks, "You came in here with your hat on, and you kept it on. You didn't even show the man at the desk the courtesy of discharging the butt of the cigarette you had been sucking. You ask for a place in the literary department, which proved that you had made no investigation in the office you desired to enter. When questioned you had the most lazy idea of the position you desired to fill and you gave the impression you were looking for a soft job—that you were born tired. You really asked for charity, for in no way did you show or attempt to show that you expected to earn any salary that might be paid you.

"Listen! There are no literary positions on the average newspaper. The man who thinks that somebody is paid a fine salary for reading the magazines and writing book notices is badly mistaken. There are few soft jobs in any profession. Everybody has to work and dig and sweat. As the years pass and competition grows keener there is less and less of an opportunity for the lazy man—the dreamer. If you want to work and grow and be somebody, tell the next man so. Tell him that you would gladly take an humble position, and that the hours and salary are of small moment, when compared with the opportunity. Make him feel that you are in earnest by being in earnest. Take off your hat and cut out the cigarette. And if you don't get a place the first time, try again and keep on trying.

"If the lazy microbe is implanted in you, you had better pick out your room at the poorhouse. You will not be a success, even in that little institution; but you will be out of the way of busy people. That is all. Of course, it hurts a little. The truth is not pleasant. Some day, after you have landed near the top, and the fellows are coming to you for situations, you can tell them this, that you have learned by years of experience: It always pays the young fellow who is seeking something to show humanity that he is every inch a man, and in earnest."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Report of the A. M. E. Conference.

The A. M. E. church conference opened at Uniontown Wednesday morning with Bishop W. B. Derrick, D. D., in the chair. The first day was taken up with the business of the conference.

In the evening Rev. J. H. Jones, D. D., President of Wilberforce College made an address at the close of which he made a strong appeal for financial aid for Wilberforce at which time $250 was raised in cash for the cause of education.

On Thursday evening Rev. Dr. Nealy of Barbadole, West India's and Rev. Dr. Faba, of South Africa, spoke and raised a collection for missions amounting to quite a large sum.

There are about 125 ministers present at this conference representing the western end of Pennsylvania and the entire state of West Virginia. It is thought that this conference has spread so that it will be necessary to make a new district and instead of having three Presiding Elders as here-to-fore there will be a fourth P. E., appointed.

The conference will adjourn Monday.

Thomas Cross Takes to Himself a Bride in the Person of Miss Mary Rich.

It has been revealed why our young friend, Thomas Cross, now located at Arcadia, came home at this time says the Philipsburg Journal. He was met here by his sweetheart, Miss Mary Rich, of Unionville and Wednesday afternoon Oct. 12, at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cross, on South Second street, they were happily married. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. P. Miller, of the Presbyterian church, and was witnessed by only the immediate friends. They left on the 5:10 train for Clearfield, and from there expected to go to Arcadia, where they will at once take up house-keeping, and where the groom holds a good position with the Elisworth Dunham Coal Co. The bride is a daughter of the late Judge Rich, of Unionville, her father and mother both being dead, and is a most excellent young lady. The groom is one of our best young men, and will prove a good husband to the young lady who has become his bride. We join in hearty congratulations.

THE GINGER JAR.

A Contortion.

Of course, it is impossible to keep it absolutely safe and sane. The campaign spirit feels a call to arise and shine, regardless of the efforts of the managers. Here is the gingery effort of M. C. K., which he describes as a contortion, endeavoring to stumble along to the tune of "Way Down in My Heart." Let her ramble—

Judge Parker is a Democrat,
And Billy Bryan, he stands pat,
Although he'd like to stand in Alton's shoes.
The night Judge Parker says to Bill,
"I know it's hard, but take your pill,
You've had two whacks and ev'ry time you'd lose."
Then poor Bill looked away,
And Alton heard him say:
"Way down in my craw
I'd like a whack at it, too.
I must withdraw
I'm glad it is you,
I had the chance
I would be in your shoe.
I'd like another whack at it, too."
Then Parker heard him speaking thus
And let rip such a mighty "cuss,"
The air was blue for twenty miles around;
And then he smiled and said, "We'll win
Spite of you, my old-has-been,
Although the road's quite rough, as you have found."
But poor Bill heaved a sigh
And Alton heard him cry:
"Way down in my craw
I'd like a whack at it, too.
If I must withdraw
I'm glad it's you.
If I had the chance
I would be in your shoe,
For I'd like another whack at it, too."

His Opinion.

Binks—What do you suppose Grover Cleveland thinks of the nomination of a man like Herrick for Governor of New York?

Jinks—Well, I rather guess on that subject he thinks it is delightful fall weather, and the fishing is excellent for this time of year.

The Coleville Philosopher.

When I get home too late at night I treat my wife's remarks with silent contempt, as she does not give me an opportunity to do anything else.

Some days it's hard to tell October from July, and some days from February.

I suppose a person who is 100 years old thinks Hank Davis is young enough.

I see the campaign was opened in Ohio the other day, but it must have been merely a matter of form.

Pretty soon Kuropatkin will be claiming that Oyama has a bunch of professionals on his team.

Weather Bulletin.

Mr. Max Rosenberg, well-known theatrical manager, is versatile, as shown by the following from his pen:

"When the rooster crows on the grist,
Then the weather changes
Or it remains as it is."

A Downward Career.

He was sturdy, vigorous and experienced.

But, alas! he was 40 years old.

It was, therefore, impossible for him to obtain a position, or even get a job.

So of necessity he became a politician, and then the descent was easy.

Too Safe and Sane.

Johnny—This ain't no 'lection year, I don't think.

Jimmy—Pa says 'tis.

Johnny—So does dad, but I don't believe it. There ain't been no torchlight parades.

Not Blessed.

Mr. Davis has just accepted the nomination by letter.

"But," said the Campaign Committee, "doesn't the old fool know that it is more blessed to give than to received?"

For diligent search revealed the fact that he had carelessly neglected to inclose a check.

Why You Should Visit the World's Fair.

The principle reason why a visit should be made to this greatest of Expositions is on account of its educational value. A visit to the World's Fair is in itself a trip around the world, for fifty cents, the price of admission. The president of one of our greatest universities has said "To the bright student the Exposition is worth a thousand college lectures." The opportunity of a life-time is afforded in which to acquire, by a few days' sojourn at the fair, an aducation which could not otherwise be received. The World's Fair Grounds cover over 1200 acres, being more than twice as large as those of the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago.

Only a few weeks remain in which to take advantage of this great opportunity. Every day from now until the close of the Fair is a "special" day. The Wabash is selling daily excursions tickets to the Fair at greatly reduced rates; $12.00 St. Louis and return, on sale daily, except Fridays and Saturdays. Tickets good in Palace Reclining Chair Cars; $15.00, St. Louis and return. Tickets on sale daily, and good in either Palace Reclining Chair Cars or Pullman Sleepers. The Wabash operates through trains from Pittsburg to the World's Fair Main Entrance, all trains leaving the magnificent new passenger station, corner of Liberty Avenue and Ferry street, at 2:00 p. m. and 8:30 p. m., daily. Can You Eat?

J. B. Taylor, a prominent merchant of Chriesman, Texas, says: "I could not eat because of a weak stomach, I lost all strength and ran down in weight. All that money could do was done, but all hope of recovery vanished. Hearing of some wonderful cures effected by use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, I concluded to try it. The first bottle benefitted me, and after taking four bottles, I am fully restored to my usual strength, weight and health." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and cures. Do You Know Vin-te-na?

Everybody who doesn't feel in prime condition physically or mentally really ought to make its acquaintance.

Vin-te-na is without doubt, the most speedy remedy for impoverished blood and weakened nerves that can be found anywhere. The reasons for its merit are, first, it contains the precise ingredients needed by the blood and nerves of people who are in anyway run down or weakened by any cause whatever, and secondly there is conscience back of ever bottle of it. The first aim of its manufacturers was to produce a nerve and blood tonic that should positively cure. Thought of its curing quality went before thought of its selling quality. When you buy Vin-te-na you buy an honest medicine of positive merit. It will ward off colds and grippe and keep you in tip top condition during the most trying months of the winter.

A SERMON TO FIREMEN.

Logans and Undines Attend M. E. Services Sunday.

The services in the Methodist church Sunday morning especially for firemen were of unusual interest. The Logan Fire Company attended in full uniform wearing their new hats and made a very nobby appearance. R. A. Beck acted as chief in the absence of John Bower who is on the sick list. There were forty of the Logans present. The Undines also turned out in large number but not in uniform.

Rev. J. A. Wood Jr. preached an eloquent and forceful sermon.

The introduction to the sermon was a history of the modern fire apparatus, dating back to the second century before Christ, in which it was shown that a regular force pump was used for extinguishing fires in Alexandria, Egypt, long before the christian era, and that the Romans used "Siphones" for the protection of their towns and cities.

Reference was made to the terrible fires in Rome during Nero's reign and later, of the lofty wooden tenement houses 8, 10, and 12 stories high, narrow streets and the terrible loss of life in those fires. From which however, grew a fire system which has steadily developed until it has grown into the marvellously perfected form of today.

At an early date Rome was placed under the control of the triumovri, three chosen citizens whose duty it was to keep up a police and fire patrol and who employed vigiles or watchmen. Such a fire patrol was in existence in the Augustian age, about the time of the birth of Christ. The fire bucket and the small axe were a portion of this equipment.

Among the results of these great conflagrations were the laying of watermains and the diminishing of the height of the houses, as the large siphones or fire engines could throw a stream only at an elevation of about sixty feet, a law was passed restricting the height of buildings to 60 feet.

Chemical extinguishers were also used, rags dipped in vinegar about the 16th century, fire hooks and fire ladders were well known.

In 1657 there is a description of John Hautechs fire engine made at Nuremberg, which could throw a stream one inch in diameter to a height of 80 feet. It stood on a truck 10 feet long and four broad. Its tank was 8ft long, 4ft high and 2ft wide. It took 28 men to work it.

Hautech also used a flexible hose with a nozzle. The Vander Heydens arranged a suction tube by which a supply of water could be taken directly from a cistern.

The long leather hose was invented by the two Dutchmen, Jas. and Nicholas Vender Heyden about the year 1672, and for a long time was called wasser schlange or "water snake." The air cylinder to regulate the flow of the stream belongs to this period.

Seamless humpen hose was woven by Beck a lace worker at Leipsic in 1720.

After this introduction the preacher presented the characteristics and qualities needed to make a good fireman. From material fire he turned the thought of his audience to the spiritual and eternal fires which are a menace to the soul and the well being of men, that vice and evil habit is a fire that eats out the life and ruins for time and eternity.

To fight these evils within us and about us, we need to exercise constant vigilence, possess indominable courage, hardy endurance and a true self devotion and these based upon faith in Jesus Christ as our personal Saviour and helper.

Do We Want the Y. M. C. A.?

BELLEFONTE, PA., Oct. 18, 1904.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN,

SIR:

It would seem incumbent upon the citizens of Bellefonte to see that the Y. M. C. A. Building was pushed to completion.

We understand that the comparatively meagre sum of $3375.00 is all that has to be raised to insure the complete success of the enterprise. The Pledges already secured have come largely from one section of the community, those only able to make medium contribution; the larger number of those able to give smaller amounts and those able to give ample sums, not having been heard from.

We understand a canvass is about to be undertaken by a representative of the State Y. M. C. A. and let us give the question serious consideration and see to it that the canvass has a fair chance for success.

It seems now to be the time to decide whether it will be a total failure or a complete success.

Nothing would be more profitable for the Physical and Moral well being of our young men and growing boys than a well equipped Gymnasium.

Let us have some expression of public opinion on the subject. Do not intelligent citizens, our fathers and mothers, our young men want it or do they not? In the words of the marriage service, "let them now speak or else hereafter forever hold their peace."

Now is the time to speak and act.

Fiftieth Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Murray celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage, Wednesday, by driving to Bellefonte, covering the same road they did on the day of their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Murray have lived continuously in Centre Hall these fifty years, and during that time have enjoyed the respect and confidence of every resident. They saw Centre Hall grow from a hamlet to the most important town on the Southside of Centre county. Mr. Murray has been a progressive citizen. During his early life he conducted a wagon maker shop, then took up the general agency for the first mower and harvesting machines, and later, about 1878, he purchased the drug store which he has since conducted in a most successful way.

Mr Murray has always championed the cause of good town and borough schools, advocated necessary public improvements, is a liberal supporter of the church and charitable institutions—a citizen worthy of imitation.

The quiet way selected by Mr. and Mrs. Murray to celebrate this important event is in keeping with their style and habits, being strangers to anything that smacks of ostentation, Centre Reporter.

"Lee and Longstreet at High Tide."

Col. Emanuel Noll, Commander of Gregg Post, No. 95, received during the past week a handsomely bound volume containing the events and the entire story of General Longstreets life, from Mrs. Helen D. Longstreet, widow of the late eminent confederate General James Longstreet. The book which has been published at Gainesville, Georgia, is full of interesting events in connection with this honored Southern gentlemans life. It is entitled "Lee and Longstreet at High Tide."

The book was arranged for publication in the fall of 1903, before Mr. Longstreets death which occurred January 2nd. 1904. It is a carefully sifted story of the records and contemporaneous witnesses. The author has drawn liberally from General Longstreets memoirs of the war, "Manassas to Appomattox," a book written by General Longstreet himself.
